Putting the brakes on bike traffic

BY TRACY HARRIS
STAFF WRITER, THE OLDHAM ERA

With warm weather already in the area, many people are getting their bicycles tuned up for summer riding.

But an ordinance drafted by the county's public safety committee should reduce the number of bicycle-related traffic snarls.

The bicycle ordinance, still in draft format, will address concerns about traffic issues caused by large groups of cyclists.

A major problem occurred last year during a ride raising funds for cancer research. Event coordinators obtained permission from the Kentucky Transportation Cabinet to be on U.S. 42, but did not notify local officials and caused traffic problems at the Old Sligo Road intersection.

EMS board to accept proposals

BY TRACY HARRIS
STAFF WRITER, THE OLDHAM ERA

Frustration and fear dominated Monday's Oldham County EMS board meeting as employees and board members discussed the organization's future.

Board members voted to move forward with creating a request for proposal to outsource management duties at Oldham County EMS.

Employees learned about the RFP in a meeting two weeks ago, although Interim Director Jim Carman told employees they weren't supposed to hear about it until Monday's meeting.

The lack of answers prompted employees to distribute 12,000 flyers to Oldham residents — a move Judge-Executive David Voegelé said is going too far.

Voegelé said the flyer contained inaccurate statements and unnecessarily scared people.

Jennifer Jones, an EMT and member of the OCEMS employee committee, said the flyer was a Countless good memories are buoying members of the North Oldham High community after the loss of an inspiring teacher.

After waging a long battle with cancer, teacher Will Jones, 37, died early March 15.

Madeleine Ricks, a 2009 NOHS graduate, said she is finding solace in her memories of the human geography and world history teacher.

Ricks remembers Jones offering Laffy Taffy candy as a prize in class — if students would sing the 2006 hit song by the same name.

Students loved his light-hearted approach, but also excelled under his tutelage.

Jones taught the first Advanced Placement human geography class at NOHS during the 2007-08 school year. A student in that class, Ricks remembers Jones apologizing for the rockiness that comes with a new course.

"His enthusiasm and joy was inspiring. He was never afraid to do something silly for a laugh and his unadulterated kindness and spirit is something that will stick with me for life."

Nonetheless, Ricks said almost all the students earned top scores on the AP exam.

Jones, a Georgia native, was diagnosed with metastatic neuroendocrine carcinoma in July 2009. He and his wife Katie had just announced they were expecting their first child, William Mark "Mack" Jones V, now 2.

Teachers and students mourned Jones by writing letters to his family and creating memorial posters.

"Will Jones left an indelible mark on this school community," said principal Lisa Jarrett. "His legacy will live on forever in the hearts of each of us."

Ricks, now a junior at Louisiana State University, kept in touch

AGAPE THRIFT SHOP SERVES ALL

BY TRACY HARRIS
STAFF WRITER, THE OLDHAM ERA

The giving spirit in Oldham County extends year-round, not just after natural disasters.

Several charities in the county help furnish needy families with clothing, household items and toiletries.

The Agape Thrift Shop, part of Immaculate Conception Church, moved to a new location in February, more than doubling its previous space, according to Barb Johnson, the church's business manager.

She said the shop has served the community for more than 30 years as a place for people to purchase clothing and household items at a minimal cost.

Revenue from the store also goes to support outreach assistance programs administered through the church, another way the church gives back to the community.

Young Crestwood father dies from pancreatic cancer

BY TRACY HARRIS

STAFF WRITER, THE OLDHAM ERA

A young father of three lost his battle with cancer Sunday.

Craig Merimee, 34, of Crestwood, was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer in October 2010.

Merimee and his wife, Michelle, maintained a blog about the family's journey.

Michelle entered a final post Sunday, telling readers that Craig was surrounded by family when he died.

"It was truly an alpha and omega moment as the same nurses and staff that took care of him in October 2010 helped keep him comfortable in his last moments of this journey," she wrote.

"Overwhelming feelings of relief, happiness, sadness and disbelief are on our hearts today."

When he was first diagnosed, Craig recalled friends and family who successfully battled cancer and believed he could fight it too.

While his wife called family and friends, Craig Googled "pancreatic cancer" on his smartphone from the hospital bed.

But when he read only 6 percent of pancreatic cancer patients survive more than five years, he turned off his phone and prayed with the hospital chaplain.

The disease is the fourth most-common cause of cancer death, with an estimated 44,000 diagnosed in the United States this year. But only 1.4 percent of those patients are younger than 40.

Craig, who worked at BB&T Bank in La Grange, became an advocate for pancreatic cancer awareness, supporting the PANCAN organization and fundraising for research. He spoke to fiscal court about it and Judge-Executive David Voegele declared November Pancreatic Cancer Awareness month.

Craig also met with a local representative for Sen. Mitch McConnell to encourage support of a bill that would develop a plan to research and provide education about the disease.

The Merimees struggled with tough decisions, like ending chemotherapy in December and what to tell their three young daughters, ages 6, 5 and 1.

Michelle considered each holiday a milestone — the family was able to celebrate Christmas together, then birthdays for Emily, Morgan and Craig.

His health began to deteriorate in mid-February.

"Things are unfortunately getting worse and I've got that bad feeling," Craig wrote on Valentine's Day.

At the end of February, Craig said he was realizing each day was not better than the day before.

But in early March, Craig found the strength to attend a Jimmy Buffet concert in Louisville — an event that Craig and Michelle had looked forward to for several months. He was admitted to the hospital Saturday.

He is survived by his wife, Michelle, and daughters Emily, Morgan and Hannah. For obituary information, see A16.

Jones

with Jones after graduation.

She still remembers Jones turning the Danity Kane song "Show Stoppin'" into a motto for students.

"Whatever it was, he told us to be show stopping," she said. "I hope we can all find comfort in the little things he left to make us smile."

Jones taught at the North Oldham campus for nine years, spending his first year as a middle school teacher before NOHS opened the following year.

As one of the first teachers at NOHS, Jones encouraged students to be positive about becoming a high school, Ricks said.

"There was no school spirit, no belief in ourselves," she said. "But he never let us say 'I hate this school.'"

Jones wanted the students to be proud of NOHS and wanted to see a school community develop.

"We really are North now," Ricks said.

Jones continued teaching through much of his battle with cancer — his last day in the classroom was March 9.

Jones underwent a number of surgeries, radiation and chemotherapy.

The beginning of his treatments came during summer break, but Jones continued radiation treatments during the fall semester.

Jones told The Oldham Era then that he didn't know if he would be able to make it through the school day because of nausea and other side effects from treatment.

But he continued teaching and coaching football, despite the aid of a walker and cane for several months.

In October 2009, the cancer in his liver and lungs had nearly disappeared and Jones was optimistic — although his optimism didn't waver as his battle continued.

That month, "Walkin' For Will" at NOHS raised nearly $5,000 for his cancer treatment. The walk-a-thon was held before the season's last home football game, and many players, students, faculty and parents walked to support the assistant coach.

Students and staff wore "Walkin' For Will," "You, Me and Mr. Jones" and "WILL Power" T-shirts throughout Jones' treatment.

Jones became both a recipient and purveyor of the faculty's prayer list, a fact that caught the eye of teacher and documentary filmmaker Roy LeBlanc.

He interviewed Jones in February for an upcoming short film about the prayer list and showed that interview to faculty just after Jones died. LeBlanc plans to make the footage available to Jones's family for use in memorial ceremonies.

Coaches handed out football jerseys Friday so players can wear them to the funeral.

School receptionist Lisa Lowrey describes Jones as a wonderful member of the NOHS family.

"North Oldham High School was lucky to have had such an inspiration and he will never know how much he will be missed," she said.

Hundreds of former students, colleagues, friends and family posted on the "Support Will Jones!" Facebook group Thursday.

More than 1,500 people belong to the group, which Jones and his wife, Katie, used to post updates.

Many students have changed their Facebook profile photos to the "Will Power" fist that adorns many posters and T-shirts.

Michelle Aubrey, a former student, said she had Jones as a teacher twice while at NOHS.

"Out of all the teachers I had he had one of the greater impacts," she said. "His enthusiasm and joy was inspiring. He was never afraid to do something silly for a laugh and his unadulterated kindness and spirit is something that will stick with me for life."

Jones was admitted to the hospital with pneumonia on Monday.

Katie posted on the Facebook group that Jones did not suffer in his final days and spent his last hours surrounded by family and friends.

"After a long, determined battle, Will could fight no more," she wrote.

Many teachers and students heard the news before school began Thursday. Junior Will Conard led a student prayer circle Thursday during lunch attended by several hundred students.

Jarrett said the strength and togetherness shown by students and staff has been "truly remarkable."

Students have written cards and letters to Jones's family and are starting on a mural in the lobby. Jarrett said they hope to rename the football stadium after Jones.

In her final update, Katie echoed the impact the community had on her family's lives.

"I have never witnessed such an outpouring of love and support in my life," she said. "I will never be able to thank all of you personally or enough for all you have done for our family over the past two-and-a-half years. I know that it meant the world to Will, too."

Originally from Marietta, Ga., Jones earned a bachelor's degree from Hanover College in Indiana and his master's degree from Bellarmine University.

Jones is survived by wife, Katie, and son, Mack. Services were Monday, March 19, at Northeast Christian Church. For obituary information, see A16. Memorial contributions may go to the "Will Power" student scholarship fund at NOHS or to the American Cancer Society.

City of Pewee Valley hosts crime prevention workshop for residents

The City of Pewee Valley will host a mayor's night in/home safety/crime prevention information session on March 27.

The event is scheduled at 7 p.m. at Town Hall, 312 Mt. Mercy Drive in Pewee Valley.

Presenters include Pewee Valley Police Chief Mike Losik, Oldham County Sheriff's Deputy Michael Meece and the Better Business Bureau's Louisville Vice-President of Operations Bruce Gadansky.

PROSPECT

State contracts purchase for historic Drumanard Estate to make way for East End Bridge

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet has contracted for purchase of the historic Drumanard Estate in Jefferson County, taking a significant step toward realization of a East End Bridge over the Ohio River.

The cabinet will pay $8.3 million for the 50-acre property owned by Soterion Corp. Closing will take place by mid-April.

An East End Bridge connecting Prospect with Utica, Ind., is part of the Louisville-Southern Indiana Ohio River Bridges Project. Kentucky and Indiana are splitting the project into two procurements - Indiana contracting for the east end crossing and Kentucky contracting for a downtown Louisville bridge and approaches on both sides of the Ohio River.

Under terms of the record of decision for the project, the approach to the East End Bridge will be tunneled beneath the Drumanard property. KYTC will place a preservation easement on the property, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

SLIGO

Sligo Baptist welcomes pastor

Pastor John Adams has been called to Sligo Baptist Church after serving as interim pastor for Covington Ridge Baptist.

A search committee for Sligo Baptist reviewed a large number of resumes and Adams' name continued to come to the top of the list. As part of the process, the search committee went to hear Adams preach at Covington Ridge Baptist Church in Westport.

Committee member Theda Crawford said, "it was as if the sermon had been written for us."

John and his wife, Megan, moved into the parsonage in October and have been on the move since.

Adams is currently attending Southern Baptist Seminary working toward his advanced masters of divinity in Christian apologetics. Megan is a teacher at Camden Elementary in Crestwood.

John graduated from Eastern Kentucky University with a masters of science in athletic administration and served in Richmond, Va., at Bethany Place Baptist Church as associate pastor of youth ministries. John and Megan moved to Louisville in 2008.

Since being called to Sligo, John has been working with Associate Pastor Earl Wayne Perry and has been working toward addressing the needs of the congregation and the surrounding area.

New studies for children on Sunday evenings called GLOW - go light our world. John and Megan both bring a love of discipleship to Sligo, so it is not surprising that the new programs encourage everyone to "get Jesus right."

To the church at Sligo this phrase has come to mean that as Christians when we understand Jesus' ministry, we can better serve those around us.

way for the organization to spread the word about what little they knew and hopefully garner the public's attention.

And the meeting did receive attention — attendees filled the fiscal court room and Voegele said the meeting would air later on public access channel 25.

During his presentation, Stan Clark, county CFO and an OCEMS board member, said the proposal is a way to look at new ideas that might help the organization, not an attempt to privatize it.

Clark said flat revenues and increasing costs are forcing OCEMS to operate at a deficit.

Personnel costs make up a large part of the budget, he said, and hazardous duty retirement expenses continue to rise.

In July, the employer match for the state's hazardous duty retirement system will be 37.6 percent of salary.

Voegele said he wants OCEMS to remain the same except for hazardous duty retirement.

Ben Willen, a paramedic and manger at OCEMS, said he depends on hazardous duty pay to keep his family safe in case of an emergency. Willen became emotional recalling a recent EMS run that could have left him seriously ill and said the retirement system balances the risk employees are in when they're out saving lives.

Clark said OCEMS will remain a public agency — although existing employees would become employees of a private company if a management contract is approved.

He pointed to outsourcing kitchen services at the jail, done at one time but not any longer, and outsourcing cleaning services as similar situations.

Several residents expressed concern that their tax dollars would be given to a private company without their consent.

Brad Keller, a Goshen resident, said it doesn't make sense to ask a for-profit company to come up with ways to save the county money.

"It's like asking the fox to design the henhouse," he said.

Several people said they would be willing to raise taxes to support OCEMS. The Oldham County Ambulance Taxing District has not increased the tax rate since 2008.

The current rate is .0474 cents per $100 of assessed property value. The state caps EMS departments at .10 cents per $100.

"Why can I vote for alcohol in La Grange but I can't vote to raise taxes for EMS?" asked La Grange resident Michelle Grider Netherton.

Clark said raising taxes should be considered the county's last option and that the board is responsible for cutting costs in other ways first.

"If our only option is to raise taxes then we, as a board, can move forward in good faith," he said.

But, the problem is that a referendum could be voted down — leaving OCEMS without a solution.

Employees said they have tried to make cost-saving suggestions before but their suggestions fell on deaf ears.

A revised schedule developed by the employee committee and submitted at the meeting would save $120,000 annually, Jones said.

Meeting attendees received a synopsis of the RFP at the meeting the current draft was posted on the EMS website Tuesday.

Clark encourages employees and residents to review the document and submit questions, comments and suggestions by April 2.

Bob Lawson, a firefighter with the La Grange Fire and Rescue, cautioned the board against outsourcing OCEMS.

"If you get rid of Oldham County EMS it'll be the dumbest decision you ever made," he said. "This is the best damn EMS we've ever had around here."

Magistrate JD Sparks said the ordinance isn't designed to ban bicyclists from riding in Oldham County but to make it safer.

Many cyclists already feel unsafe riding in the county — last May two cyclists were shot by a BB gun while riding in Pewee Valley.

The ordinance would impact cycling events, including races and training rides that meet certain criteria.

Any ride that includes more than 50 participants will need a permit and the course will be evaluated by officials to determine the number of police officers needed to direct traffic.

Event organizers will be responsible for paying standard rates for police support.

Sparks said it is also unfair for residents to be inconvenienced by training rides that generate profits for Louisville businesses.

"They're making money off inconveniencing our citizens," he said.

"People are just coming in here and using our county."

However, the largest Ironman Louisville training rides are organized by riders on a social networking site for triathletes.

The permit will also include information about the county's sign ordinance, which prohibits the type of temporary directional signs often used for cycling events.

Organizers will also be required to advertise details of their event in advance to notify residents of potential detours.

The proposed ordinance is still being revised by members of the public safety commission, which includes magistrates Sparks, Bob Dye and Bob Leslie, the committee's chair.

TRANSPORTATION

Discussion of Allen Lane widening project, overpass planned Tuesday

BY TRACY HARRIS
STAFF WRITER, THE OLDHAM ERA

An upcoming meeting will give Oldham County residents an opportunity to ask questions about road construction and a new overpass crossing I-71 Tuesday.

Changes to Allen Lane in La Grange include widening the road and building a new overpass to link the Oldham Reserve Development to Commerce Parkway.

Allen Lane currently runs from Ky. 146 at Covenant United Methodist Church to Commerce Parkway.

The Kentucky Transportation Cabinet plans to widen Allen Lane and add the overpass with construction beginning next year.

State officials are obtaining final easements for the overpass, set to open in 2015.

Local officials hope the overpass will eventually be the foundation for an exit off I-71 near mile marker 20.

The overpass will connect to New Moody Lane and provide access to Oldham Reserve — if city and county officials construct other roads inside the business park.

At a county finance committee meeting Friday, Don Basham, chair of the Oldham-La Grange Development Authority, encouraged the county to make that investment.

Currently, Eden Parkway provides access from New Moody Lane past The Rawlings Group building. However, it ends shortly past that building and dead-ends in a field.

Long-term plans for the development are for three main roadways through Oldham Reserve. Eden Parkway, running north-south, Peak Road, running east-west through the park's center, and Ring Road. Ring Road will split off New Moody Lane just past Forrest Park Drive and encircle the southern area of Oldham Reserve, ending at Ky. 53 and Blakemore Lane.

JASON STAMM/THE OLDHAM ERA

The intersection of Allen Lane and Commerce Parkway in La Grange.

Of course, none of those roads exist yet, except a short part of Eden Parkway.

Basham is encouraging county officials to invest in more infrastructure, which he feels will help sell the property.

Deana Epperly Karem, executive director of Oldham Chamber and Economic Development, agrees.

Karem said companies want to buy the land and start building right away — they don't want to wait for a road to be constructed.

Magistrate Kevin Eldridge said without investing in infrastructure, the state's Allen Lane and overpass projects will be pointless.

"It'll be a road to nowhere," he said.

While roads inside Oldham Reserve will be decided by local officials, the KYTC is holding a public meeting for the Allen Lane and overpass portion.

The informal meeting will include a project overview and time for comments and questions.

The meeting is 5:30-7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Oldham County Fiscal Court Building.

NEWS BRIEFS

County officials join fight against synthetic drugs

Synthetic drugs will soon be banned in Oldham County if magistrates approve a proposed ordinance.

The ordinance, which will be voted on at an upcoming fiscal court session, follows on the heels of a state house bill that will do the same. The house approved the bill and it is now in the senate. Other counties have passed similar ordinances banning synthetic and designer drugs.

Synthetic drugs are made of chemical compounds and simulate the highs associated with their organic counterparts. Marijuana is the most common synthetic drug and is usually sold at convenience stores, truck stops, tobacco stores and "head shops" as a form of incense.

Cannabis-like chemicals are blended with herbs and spices and are sold under brand names including Spice and K2.

Teens across the country have ended up in emergency rooms after using the products, including in Maryland and Minnesota.

The drugs were recently banned in the U.S. and the Drug Enforcement Administration has proposed classifying them as schedule 1 controlled substances.

The county's ordinance would impose fines for possession and for businesses selling synthetic drugs. Subsequent offenses for selling synthetic drugs would include a $1,500 fine, jail time and loss of business license.

Health department issues survey

Oldham County residents are being asked to take a short health survey to help improve services and programs across the county.

The survey is part of the Coalition for a Healthy Oldham County and results will be used to identify the most pressing problems that could be addressed through community action.

There are 20 questions on the survey, which ask respondents about risk factors, health issues and where they receive medical care. The survey is anonymous but respondents can fill in their phone number for a chance to win prizes, including a Kindle and YMCA passes.

The deadline is April 5. Surveys are available online at oldhamcountyhealthdepartment.org. For information call 222-3516.

EMPOWER OTHERS

It's probably easier to herd fish in the open ocean than to lead people effectively. This is proven by the mountain of books on successful management techniques and the popularity of leadership seminars. I don't agree with modern advisors that people need to be managed or controlled. Do people really need to be managed? Who on earth wants to be managed? How many people want to work like a chicken in a coop that will be turned into a stewing fowl if it fails to lay an egg a day?

Good managers lead by setting an example and knowing the abilities and shortcomings of their workers.

Of course it takes considerable effort and self-confidence to be such a leader, but in the long run it is a style that is more equitable and less stressful than the bullying and fixation on the bottom line that is so rampant nowadays.

I'm not saying businesses shouldn't make a profit. The issue is what that profit costs in human terms for both the bosses and the workers.

The CEO who screams and threatens that heads will roll at the slightest infraction accomplishes nothing but the rising of everyone's blood pressure.

The task still hasn't been done; some walk so carefully and softly that production is slowed down; others begin to harbor resentment and fear the indignity they feel.

Nobody is inspired to put in more effort, except perhaps those engineering the CEO's downfall.

An ordinary person will do anything to keep the corner office and its implied authority, but a civilized person understands the surest way to stay on top is to encourage workers to reach their highest capabilities. Flogging might make a sailor bleed, but it won't make him run up the shrouds any faster.

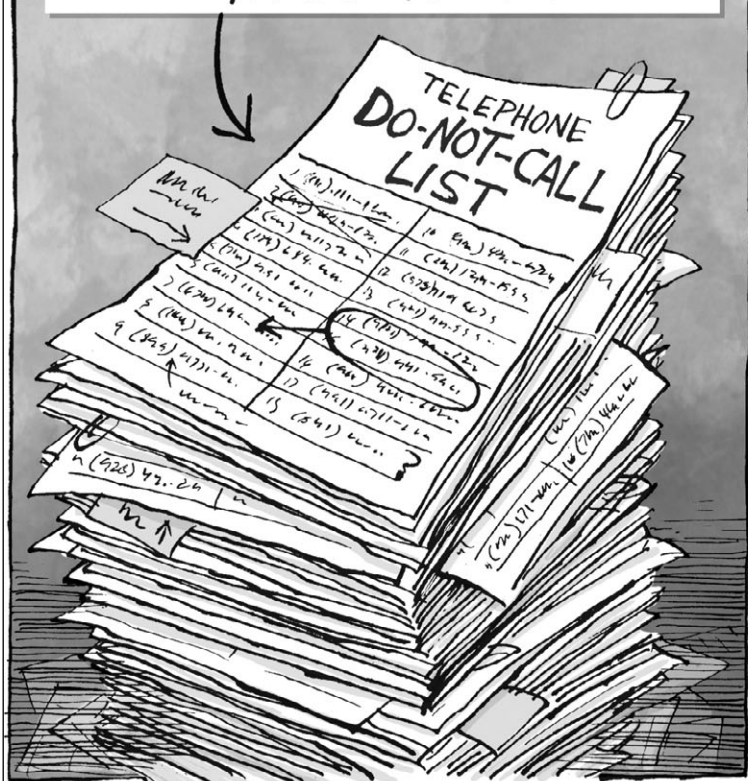

What to do about the bossy bosses who keep their fists closed and run off at the mouth? Show them desirable conduct.

Keep your temper under control, observe, learn from all, don't preach, just practice, maintain your dignity, and listen before you speak. Your time to lead might come or it might not, but at least the waiting will be rewarding. And don't forget those on top can end up on the bottom quickly.

A truly fine leader will know when to stop demanding more because he or she understands the capabilities and limitations

And God said, 'It's not about you'

In all the years we've been traveling to Central America, only once have I had to go to a hospital.

Our daughter had developed an unusual rash on her arms and I needed to make sure that it wasn't serious.

We wouldn't be back in the states for another month, so I warily proceeded to the local emergency room.

It was dismal, to say the least. It was similar to what I imagine U.S. hospitals were like in the 1930s, only not so clean. The sounds reminded me of old, scary movies set in asylums.

I couldn't help but wonder what was happening to the small child agonizingly screaming for his mother to make them stop. Or what illness plagued the elderly man loudly moaning in a room somewhere down the dark hallway.

Five years have passed since that ER visit, and I still cringe every time I think of it.

Yesterday, I received a call that the young daughter of a friend was having surgery in the same hospital.

We dearly love this little family and the phone call stayed on my mind all day.

We happen to be in the area this week and I wanted to visit her, but I tried to justify waiting until she got home.

Hubby came in from work and said, "We need to go see her."

I hemmed and hawed. I said I didn't want to unnecessarily expose our kids to illness. I said I thought it would be acceptable if he went for both of us.

I reminded him that I've felt a tendency toward being a recluse lately, and that this was way out of my comfort zone. I told him that I couldn't bear to see the sights, smell the odors, and hear the sounds again. I told him flat out, "I will not go!"

He went without me.

He returned with the heavy sadness and burden that I personally was fighting so hard to avoid.

GINGER TRUITT
guest columnist

He described the bleak state of the children's ward. The subpar equipment, the dirty mattresses, the stifling heat, the open windows letting in mosquitoes and smoke from nearby brush fires.

And most shockingly, our sweet girl's incision was not bandaged.

Five hours after surgery, her mother had still not seen a doctor for a post-op discussion or been given any instructions for her care.

"You need to go," he said.

"I can't do it," I replied. About that time our 4-year-old son fell and hit his head on the hard tile floor.

Hubby scooped him up and said, "God's going to see that you go to the hospital one way or the other, Jonah!"

"Nope! I'm going to the Laundromat!" And I left.

I got in the car and argued with God.

"This is not a big deal!

I don't need to go to the hospital. My heart can't handle it tonight, God. The burden of sick, hurting children is too much for me right now."

And God responded in a nearly audible voice, "IT'S NOT ABOUT YOU!"

I drove through the chain-link fence, and surveyed the run down, low-rise building. It was dark, except for a few scattered fluorescent bulbs. I walked past the ER entrance and tried to ignore the painful sounds coming from inside.

Last year, a young boy was choking on a bean, and instead of using basic life-saving procedures, the doctor had ordered an x-ray. The little boy died in his mother's arms while they were waiting.

There didn't seem to be anyone else in the hospital. I didn't see doctors or nurses. No one at the cashier's desk or reception area.

I walked down the long, dark hallway, trying to focus on the seafoam green paint peeling from the concrete walls. I shuddered when I saw the hand-painted sign pointing the way to

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

WANT LIQUOR? GO SOMEWHERE ELSE

To the editor:
As a native of Oldham County and a Christian, I have an obligation to voice my opinion. I cannot vote on the liquor issue because I do not live in the city.

When people moved to Oldham County and La Grange, they knew it was dry. It was a nice and wonderful place to live. You wanted to come and live here because of the environment. Now you are asking people to vote on a change – not for the better. But for the worse. Shame on you people. The country clubs want a license to sell beer and liquor so their members can drink before or after golf. Good luck, people driving on Ky. 53 or Ky. 393. Watch out, but drink responsibly.

From what I can remember, Eminence was going to be put on the map with liquor stores. Go there and live – it is such a lovely little place. Or go down to Market Street in Louisville to live. It is such a lively place. You want my opinion? If you do not like what we have, leave. What is the No. 1 drug problem in America? Liquor in our schools and colleges. And yet we accept social drinking. I love Oldham County. This is my home. For you that want liquor, go someplace else. I love my county and La Grange.

Local business serves tornado ravaged area with kindness

To the editor:
In the wake of the terrible storms March 2, there are a few guys in our own backyard that everyone needs to know about.

Many of you know Amin Gunzalez and his brothers at the Buckner Marathon.

I started going there regularly about a year ago and I think the world of them. I call him Sunshine and he calls me Moonshine (not real sure about that, but oh well). He always has a smile on his face and most of the time is singing or laughing. "Singing" is a loose term here.

These guys also own a store (and live) in Borden, Ind. Their store is on Highway 60 and was one of the only stores not leveled by tornadoes in the area. These guys could have easily closed the doors and gone home to be with their families but they didn't. They stayed and kept the store open.

Now, I'm not sure if they had electricity or the extent of the damage, but just to keep it open when you should have been home with your family says a lot.

But here's the kicker – they gave everything away.

If someone needed ice or diapers or gas for a generator, they gave it to them.

In this day and time when price gouging is so common and almost accepted, these guys went above and beyond and I'm sure solidified their bond with the community.

I've always liked them but now they've got my business as long as they're around.

So many times all anyone ever hears is the bad. It's time we spread the good too. Please help me spread the news around about these guys.

of employees. It is trite but true — knowledge is power.

And the most powerful knowledge is to understand how to convince people to do your bidding without commands, demands or threats.

In politics, this is labeled “charisma.” A great leader has the ability to get other people to want to share his or her goal and make them think it was their own idea.

One great advantage of empowering others and letting other people shine at whatever they do best is that you can bask in reflected glory. It doesn't cost much and you can rest assured that everyone is satisfied.

“Stay focused,” I admonished myself when a small lizard ran across the ceiling just above my head. Finally, I found a janitor with an old string mop and a bucket of brown water.

He pointed in the direction of the children's ward, and I pressed onward.

I tried to channel my dad who is an expert at hospital visitations. He's also good at it because he has always known, “It's not about you!”

Finally, I made my way to the tiny little girl I had come to see. I wished I could scoop her up and take her to the Peyton Manning Children's Hospital in Indianapolis, but of course that was impossible.

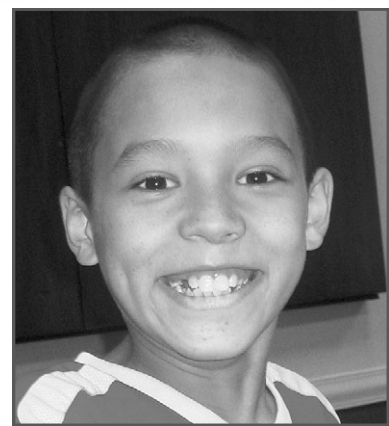

Instead, I knelt by her bedside and prayed. I prayed that her pain would be minimal, and that she would recover quickly and without infection.

And I thanked God for reminding me that sometimes, most of the time, it's not about me.

South Oldham students host shoe drive

Support for Soles 4 Souls brings 200 pairs of donated shoes

Students at South Oldham High School are changing the world one pair of shoes at a time, after learning that 600 million people around the world are affected by diseases including hookworm, a deadly disease caused by walking barefoot in contaminated areas.

Millions of children are without shoes, including 20 million in sub-Saharan Africa alone.

In America, more than 300 million pairs of shoes are tossed in landfills each year.

Soles4Souls is a non-profit organization that prevents and solves these issues. They dedicate their time collecting shoes to give relief to the victims of abject suffering and poverty.

Shoes collected by South Oldham High School students are sent to a new owner; one who perhaps has never owned a pair of shoes in their life.

It all began in 2004 when the tsunami struck Southeast Asia.

The founder and CEO of Soles4Souls Inc., Wayne Elsey, felt compelled to do something.

This triggered many calls to various executives in the shoe industry and provided Elsey with a quarter of a million shoes to donate to victims in devastated countries.

Soles4Souls also helped individuals left without their belongings after Hurricane Katrina devastated parts of Mississippi and Louisiana.

Soles4Souls receives large donations from footwear companies, retailers, churches, nonprofit ministries, civic groups, schools and individuals who want to help.

Over the past six years, shoes have been sent to 129 different countries, some of which include Iraq, Kenya, India, or Afghanistan. All in all, Soles4Souls has been able to donate more than 16 million pairs of shoes since 2004.

Recently, South Oldham High School's Family Career and Community Leaders of America student organization conducted a shoe drive to help with Soles4Souls.

In just two weeks, the students collected more than 200 pairs of shoes.

Students in Robin Krause's sixth-period class earned first place in the shoe drive and Rachel Salyer's class earned second place.

If you are interested in donating new or gently used shoes, you can ship them to one of Soles4Souls' various warehouses.

For warehouse locations and general information, visit soles4souls.org.

When life is like a pig sty

One of Jesus' most popular parables is "The Prodigal Son" (Luke 15:11-32). In it a selfish young man squanders his inheritance before his father has even died and is afraid to return home.

Finally, his life becomes so desperate he decides to return, figuring that life as a servant of his father will be better than feeding pigs and starving to death.

When he gets home his father welcomes him with love and a big party. Jesus tells this story to let us know how much our heavenly father loves us no matter how sinful or selfish we have been or what pig sty we might be living in.

People can relate to this parable at so many different levels.

For example, has your life ever turned so bad you think you are living in a pig sty? Here is a modern retelling of the parable written by Pastor John Stokes, which focuses on how life can be a bit like a pig sty.

He got to watch some little kids play soccer, but he didn't know any of them. He was able to enjoy the game without the distraction of being anxious about winning or losing, and he wished the parents and coaches could have done the same.

The 5- and 6-year-olds

AL EARLEY
From a Religious Point of View

were pretty evenly matched, and nobody scored in the first period. In the second period the coach of one team pulled out his first-team players and put in the subs, with the exception of his best player, who he left at goalie. But the other team's coach left his best players in and the subs were no match. Team two swarmed around the little guy at goalie. He was an outstanding athlete for being 5, but he was no match for three or four who were equally as good.

The goalie gave it his all. He was recklessly throwing his body in front of incoming balls, trying valiantly to stop them. Team two scored two quick points in succession. It infuriated the young boy.

He became a raging maniac; shouting, running and diving, but he couldn't stop the goals.

It didn't take long to figure out who the goalie's parents were. They were kind looking people and yelled positive encouragement to their son. After the third goal the boy changed.

He realized he couldn't stop them. He didn't quit, but he became quietly desperate. After the fourth goal, the boy retrieved the ball from the net, handed it to the referee, and then cried. He just stood there while huge tears rolled down both cheeks. The boy went to his knees, then his father went onto the field, although the game was still in progress. He hugged him, kissed him and cried with him. He carried him off the field, and when they got close to the sidelines the dad said, "Scotty, I'm so proud of you. You were great out there. I want everybody to know that you are my son."

"Daddy," the boy sobbed, "I couldn't stop them. I tried, daddy, I tried and they scored on me."

"Scotty, it doesn't matter how many times they score on you. You're my son, and I'm proud of you. I want you to go back out there and finish the game. I know you want to quit, but you can't. And son, you're going to get scored on again, but it doesn't matter. Go on, now."

Do you ever feel like the little guy on the field? Have you ever felt like you were throwing your body in every direction, full of anger and rage? Do you struggle with temptation and sin with every ounce of your being? Do you feel like you can hear Satan laughing at you?

He scores again, and the tears come, and you go to your knees; sinful, convicted, and helpless.

Then your heavenly father rushes onto the field, right in front of the whole crowd, the whole laughing world, and picks you up, hugs you, and says, "I am so proud of you. You were great out there. I want everybody to know that you are my child."

2012 BOYS' BASKETBALL STATE TOURNAMENT SEMI-FINALISTS

JASON STAMM/THE OLDHAM ERA

Players on the OCHS bench react to OCHS senior forward Tyler Wesley's game-winning layup in the quarterfinals. OCHS scored the game-winning points with 3.9 seconds remaining and held on for the win.

COLONELS MAKE HISTORY

Oldham County High School boys finish in final four of state basketball tournament

BY JASON STAMM
SPORTS EDITOR, THE OLDHAM ERA

LEXINGTON — Members of the Oldham County High School boys' basketball team weren't alive the last time it happened. For the first time since 1985, the Colonels advanced to the semi-finals of the KHSAA Sweet 16 state basketball tournament, making clutch plays and showing a high level of intensity. OCHS defeated Bowling Green 55-48 March 15 in the first round and held off Knott County Central 36-34 Friday with a crucial last-second shot. The Colonels' run ended with a 56-43 loss to Scott County in the semi-finals Saturday, but OCHS Coach Jason Holland said he felt proud of his team for their effort that began before the season. "The biggest thing is the work they put in," he said. "They were going hard in May, June and July and their commitment says a lot about who they are. These will be memories they'll never forget."

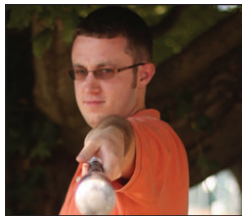

The Colonels created great memories in their first two games. The biggest came in the quarterfinals and from OCHS' biggest player. Tyler Wesley, the Colonels' 6-foot-7 senior forward and leading scorer this season with 12 points per game, sat much of the game on the bench because of fouls. But when his team needed him most, Wesley came through. He gave OCHS the lead for good with 3.9 seconds left after he faked a pass to his left, spun to his right towards the basket and rolled the ball off his finger tips and into the basket. Fouled on the play, Wesley calmly connected on the free throw for a 36-33 lead. "I knew I'd come back in the game eventually," he said. "I wanted to make a difference somehow, it just happened to be in the last three seconds of the game." The Colonels also dodged two intentionally-missed free throws by Knott County Central on the ensuing possession that gave the Patriots a chance to tie the score. After the second miss, the ball caromed off of players' feet as the buzzer sounded, prompting a wild celebration from OCHS players and fans that occupied one Rupp Arena end zone. Junior forwards Garrett Masters and Jacob Kopp credited their

I've gone to basketball heaven

Though I've lived in a few different cities and towns, I've never lived anywhere but Kentucky. And in this state, basketball takes on a life of its own. Last week, I felt like I went to basketball heaven. I covered two of the highest levels of basketball and a few times, I had to remind myself I wasn't dreaming. I was all set to follow the Oldham County High School boys' basketball team as the Colonels played in the Sweet 16 Thursday at the mecca of basketball in Kentucky, Rupp Arena in Lexington. I hoped to trek to the KFC Yum! Center later that night in Louisville to watch the NCAA men's basketball tournament, where the term "March Madness" has its roots. But it all hinged on the NCAA tournament first-round game. My media credential to the NCAA tournament depended on Western Kentucky University (my alma mater) winning its first round game March 13 against Mississippi Valley State. I had some connections with the Hilltoppers that would afford me a pass if they won. With President Barack Obama and British Prime Minister David Cameron in attendance, WKU pulled out the victory, moving them to the second round to play the University of Kentucky at the Yum! Center in Louisville. After The Oldham Era went to press that Tuesday night, I nearly ran circles around the Beef 'O' Brady's parking lot in La Grange in celebration. The first thing on Thursday's agenda was getting to Lexington to see the Colonels. I journeyed to Rupp Arena on one of five school buses full of OCHS students. Walking on the floor at the arena is like touching sacred ground. Cameras flash all around. Fans take pictures posing on the edge of the floor. Throughout both tournaments, I spoke to a number of well-known basketball personalities. A who's who of famous names are in attendance. I spoke with former UK coach Joe B. Hall, who coached the 1978 national championship team and co-hosts a syndicated radio show with famed University of Louisville coach Denny Crum. Hall said he likes the Colonels' intensity. "They're quick and fun to watch," he said. I pinched my arm. Yes, I just spoke with Hall, a name I've heard repeatedly since my childhood. OCHS won its first round game over Bowling Green and its quarterfinal game over Knott County Central, affording me the opportunity to return to Rupp Arena Friday and Saturday. I also chatted with WKU Coach Ray

Along for the ride

Students travel by bus to see Oldham at famed arena

BY JASON STAMM
SPORTS EDITOR, THE OLDHAM ERA

Aside from a few scattered colors, an army of blue-clad students wait anxiously behind Oldham County High School. Five buses stand ready to transport the students to Rupp Arena in Lexington March 15 to watch the Colonels' boys' basketball team play Bowling Green in the first round of the state tournament. Students traveled to the game to cheer on their classmates, hang out with friends and even take advantage of being out of class. But by the end of the day, a few found more important reasons why they attended. After finding their seats on the buses that morning, the students' excitement quickly left as sleepiness kicked in. But the excitement didn't dwindle in the front two seats of bus No. 5, where two former basketball lifers trade stories. OCHS teachers Wes Husband and Brent Dennison both coached as assistants for the Colonels' boys' basketball team under former coach Gary Forrest. Husband coached from 2000 to 2008, while Dennison coached from 2006 to 2009. Husband also played on the 1994 OCHS team that lost in the region championship, one win away from the state tournament, a moment he remembers vividly. Despite coaching at the 2003 state tournament where the Colonels won their first round game, Husband said he'd trade the experience to play in the state tournament. OCHS lost in the quarterfinals to eventual state champion Mason County, which featured Chris Lofton, later a star at the University of Tennessee and who Husband said excited the crowd with his play. "The electricity in that place was unreal," Husband said. "The hair was standing up on the back of my neck." The basketball chat between Husband and Dennison stretches throughout the hour and a half bus ride. As the bus exits I-64 in Lexington, there's a renewed energy among the students. Freshmen Jordan Bruce, Bethany Massey and Abigail Stewart review a printed list of cheers to chant at the game. OCHS' pep club, The Blue Crew, distributed the list to students. The girls are particularly excited about the "gorilla chant," where students stomp their feet, and the "Jaws chant," in which the band performs the theme song from the movie. Just 20 minutes after the buses arrive at Rupp Arena, it's still over an hour before tip-off. But the students are already filing into their seats where they'll occupy the lower section of one end zone and a portion of the upper deck

Oldham children, parents participate in local circus

The run-down park looks like nothing more than that. In the park, an unassuming, old, concrete building sits 500 feet off River Road in Louisville. But inside, there's a gymnasium where performers twirl, eat fire and fly through the air. The American Turners Circus is in its 62nd year inside the building and features a number of Oldham County performers who participate in acrobatics, juggling and dancing. But many people don't know the circus exists. Tamara Meinecke of Louisville brought her sons, Isaac, 5, and Jeremiah, 1, to the show on Sunday. A teacher at the Waldorf School, she heard about the circus from students. "I had a horse in Prospect and drove by this all the time but I had no idea what it was," she said. "A friend of mine told me it was like Cirque du Soleil but with people you know." Lynley Elliott of Crestwood is the circus director and is hoping to bring more exposure to the event, which takes place during two weekends each March. This year, there are six performances, featuring 170 performers, 30 from Oldham County. No animals are involved, though

Whitfield, Wright claim awards

South coach, senior forward named tops in eighth region

BY JASON STAMM
SPORTS EDITOR, THE OLDHAM ERA

The South Oldham High School girls basketball team's season ended with a loss to Walton-Verona in the eighth region championship game, but recognition for the Lady Dragons' season isn't over.

SOHS senior Jasmine Whitfield has been named the eighth region's co-player of the year, along with Owen County senior guard Rianna Gayheart, by the Kentucky Association of Basketball Coaches. Whitfield has also been named a finalist for the Kentucky Miss Basketball award, which will be announced April 28.

Other finalists are Boone County senior forward Sydney Moss, Ryle senior guard Jenna Crittendon, Manual senior guard April Wilson and Perry County Central senior guard Kendall Noble.

Lady Dragons Coach Frank Wright has also been named the eighth region coach of the year by the KABC.

Whitfield, a University of Cincinnati signee, averaged 22.5 points, 6.5 rebounds and 5.4 steals per game this season.

She finished her career as the school-leader in career steals with 498 and is second in career points, with 1,999, and rebounds, with 685.

Whitfield said she is honored to be recognized as a top player in the region.

"I was very surprised by it and I had no idea I'd be one of them," she said. "It just feels good to be rewarded for your hard work and everything you've put in."

This season, Wright's eighth as SOHS coach, the Lady Dragons finished 27-5 with the most wins in school history.

"I'm humbled and honored by it," he said. "It really says a lot about the people who help you, like the players and the assistants you have."

SOHS took runner-up in the eighth region tournament March 4 with a 52-47 loss to Walton-Verona in the championship game.

But Wright said his award is the result of the Lady Dragons' solid play all season. As a co-player of the year, Whitfield will test her skill with other top players around the state for the Kentucky all-star team in the annual Kentucky/Indiana all-star series this spring.

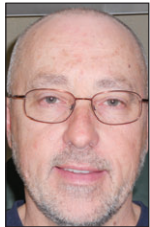

Whitfield said her bigger commitment and growth as a player this season helped her reach an all-star level.

"I became more serious about basketball this year and helped my teammates more," she said. "I just matured as a better player and a better person."

Harper, Morehead State Assistant Coach Adam Howard and former UK basketball player Cameron Mills, who played on the 1996 and 1998 national championship teams.

But the biggest name I came across sat inconspicuously at the Yum! Center on Thursday.

At halftime of the game between the Wildcats and the Hilltoppers, a long line of reporters waited for a snack in the media room.

I just wanted a glass of water, so I walked across the hallway, underneath the stands, to a media lounge.

Two men sat affixed on a television showing the game between Wichita State and Virginia Commonwealth. It was Miami Heat President Pat Riley and Chet Kammerer, vice president of player personnel for the Heat.

Riley also played basketball for legendary coach Adolph Rupp at UK and later coached the Los Angeles Lakers, New York Knicks and Miami Heat, winning a total of five NBA championships.

I stood next to them watching the game and moments later, I chatted about the game with both of them.

During the second half of the game between UK and WKU, a television camera spotted Riley and displayed him on the JumboTron at the Yum! Center.

A roar of cheers came from the crowd, predominantly clad in Wildcats attire.

A few goosebumps popped up on my arms. I had to pinch myself as a reminder.

Elliott said she once placed a fake mane on her golden retriever and had the dog jump through hoops.

The circus itself is a fund-raiser for the American Turners' Louisville society. There are 54 branches of the society nationwide, which promote health, happiness and progress of mankind, according to the Turners' website, through sports, games and events.

The circus is run by volunteers, including Elliott, who pays for some of the equipment, with the help of other performers.

She's also one of many volunteer instructors, who begin planning for the circus in April and put performers through teaching and training beginning in January.

Elliott said she loves putting on the same event she participated in as a child.

Elliott also performs in the silks act in which she and other aerialists climb silk curtains, wrap themselves in them like spiders 15 feet off the ground and perform stunts.

"It makes me tick," Elliott said. "Seeing the smiles on the kids' faces and it's done for them, I'm getting chill right not just talking about it."

Three more performances are scheduled at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday and at 2 p.m. Sunday.

You just have to look past the building's appearance to find it.

For the first time since 1985, the Oldham County High School boys' basketball team advanced to the semi-finals, tying the school record of 31 wins in the process. The big moment came in the quarterfinals when senior forward Tyler Wesley put the Colonels in the semi-finals with a game-winning layup and free throw with 3.9 seconds remaining, inciting a frenzy of cheers from OCHS players and fans in attendance. The Colonels also defeated Bowling Green in the first round before falling to Scott County in the semi-finals.

experience at the state tournament last year as the factor most responsible for the Colonels' run.

OCHS fell to George Rogers Clark 56-39 in the first round of the 2011 state tournament.

"When we were here last year, we just kinda sat back and were amazed," Masters said after the Colonels' quarterfinal win.

"Now that we're here again, we're taking it a lot more serious and playing as hard as we can."

OCHS played hard in its semi-final game Saturday morning as well, but the Colonels succumbed to a 24-10 third quarter-run by Scott County which gave the Cardinals a commanding 47-26 lead.

OCHS junior guard Sam Gruber said the Colonels still believed they could win, but got no closer than 53-41 with 2:25 left in the game.

"I kept telling (my teammates) 'Don't quit,'" he said. "It's a terrible memory if we do quit after making it all the way here."

That willpower did help in OCHS' first round win over Bowling Green. The Colonels took the lead over the Purples with three minutes left in the first quarter and led the rest of the game.

OCHS players didn't look tough after the Colonels' loss in the semi-finals though, as they buried their heads in their jerseys and walked somberly off the court. But as they strolled, cheers erupted from fans gathered around the exit. Cheerleaders lined the walkway and clapped.

A lot had been accomplished in a short amount of time, memories that will be passed to the next generation of Colonels.

In the game, OCHS takes the lead with three minutes to go for a 27-26 lead at halftime.

During the intermission, seniors Dallas Moore and Trey Render talk about the first half and how they hope to pump up the rest of the students in the stands.

Render says the seniors are recognized by the rest of the students to sit in the front part of the student section, getting them closer to the famed floor the Wildcats play on.

"Rupp Arena is just so historic," Moore says. "It's just infinitely better than a high school gym."

In the second half, the Colonels hold off the Purples and advance with a 55-48 win.

As the students head back to the buses 45 minutes later, Ashley Hall, an OCHS freshman, talks with freshman Tyler Caswell about how to remove blue fabric paint from her face, arms, neck and legs.

A friend spontaneously painted her in the stands.

"This is just what we do to show our school spirit," she says.

Sophomore Kaitlyn Byrd ended up with a handprint of black paint on her face from a friend.

Byrd said the paint initially irritated her, but on the bus ride home, she said she didn't mind.

She'd realized the importance of being part of the trip to Rupp Arena.

"We all as a school come together for the same reason," she says. "It's just such a great sense of community. Plus, we won."
